Specialist

Always remove bales from the upper row first.

Take care with PTOs.

Cows with calves can be dangerous.

Half-day farm safety code of practice training courses are taking place at a centre near you. It is a legal requirement to complete and update the farm safety code of practice or to prepare a safety statement.

Farmers who attend this course will:

- learn about the attitude, knowledge and management skills needed to manage safety on a farm;
- learn about the key requirements of health and safety legislation affecting farmers;
- know the major causes of accidents and ill health;

- know how to complete a farm safety risk assessment document;
- satisfy the farm safety training course requirements set out in the Targeted Agriculture Modernisation Schemes (TAMS) II terms and conditions; and,
- select to complete the course in person or online.

To be notified of course dates and venues, and to book a place, contact your local Teagasc office using the information listed in Table 1 overleaf or sign up online at:
<https://teagasc evolve.clr.events/>.
